Creating an inclusive classroom in your school

In line with Singapore's vision of an inclusive society, DAS Academy provides professional development training for educators to better their awareness and support of students with special educational needs (SEN) in mainstream classrooms. Having provided in-service SEN training for SEN Officers since 2005, DAS Academy advocates contextualised and practical strategies for mainstream educators to adopt.

At the DAS Academy, we believe that if you get things right for learners with SEN, you will get things right for every learner. The effort taken to make instruction accessible to learners with SEN will always improve learning for all learners in the mainstream classroom.

CUSTOMISABLE TO YOUR SCHOOL'S NEEDS

Recognising that the individual needs of each school are unique, our lecturers are able to discuss your training needs before advising on a professional training programme that takes into account the needs and profile of your school's staff and students. Schools can specify the subjects that they will like a special focus on and we do our best to address these areas in our training.

Why choose us?

An Asian Perspective

Academic programmes are developed with a perspective relevant to the Asian educational environment

Wide Perspective

Lecturers have a wide range of expertise in the fields of Specific Learning Differences, Psychology and Special Education

A Practical Approach

Academic programmes provide both theoretical and practical approaches

Is your school ready for students with SEN?

Statistics show a rising number of students with special educational needs (SEN) in mainstream schools, from 2.7% of the total school population in 2013 to 4% in 2016. In every typical class of 40, there is a risk of 2 students falling through the cracks, especially if their learning needs have not been considered.

Take our dyslexia-friendly quiz on inclusion to find out if your school is ready for students with special educational needs (SEN)
